

Moses' Humble Pie vs. the Path of Pride

■ Moses' Birth

Everything I have been given is for God's divine purpose, not just to spend on my own pleasures.

I can do whatever I want with the blessings and privileges God has given me. It's my life.

■ Moses Kills Egyptian

What I have been given cannot rescue, save, or fix anyone.

It's all up to me to help people out of their suffering condition. I care about the suffering of others more than God does!

■ Moses in Midian

God will take me through the circumstances I need in order for me to realize that I can't accomplish what He desires, but He can, and He is with me.

There are seasons of my life that are wasted and useless to God's plan. My failures are too great to be used by God.

■ Moses at the Burning Bush

God will provide everything I need to do His will, and He expects me to say "yes" to His plan.

I don't have what is needed to do what God is wanting me to do. I can't and I don't want to.

■ Moses Delivers the Message

What God says about my discouraging circumstances is what is true, not what I see in the situation.

Nothing works out the way it is supposed to. What I see is what is real.

■ Moses and the Israelites

The success of my God-given job is measured by steadfast obedience, not by the response or result.

If things aren't turning out right, it means God has messed up somewhere or I've messed up somehow.

■ Moses' Authority Challenged

Because I am secure in God's calling I don't need to defend myself when I am challenged.

I must stand up for myself when others don't understand, criticize what I am doing, or don't acknowledge my God-given authority.

■ Moses and God's Presence

Knowing God's character and drawing into His presence is more important than how successful I appear.

As long as I appear successful and accomplish the job, it doesn't matter how close I am with God or He with me.
